SPECIAL ISSUE: DECOLONIZATION
15 June 2024
Compiled by Caroline Prout

The current issue was inspired by the 2023 ASEEES Convention's broadly defined theme of "DECOLONIZATION" "across time, place, field, and institutional setting." Viewed as not only a contemporary and historical force, "Decolonization" in this context also applies to "current research, teaching, and professional practices." As can be seen by this bibliographical compilation, which brings together the latest scholarship over the past ten or so years, the word "decolonization" and its variants have become more prevalent but not completely supplanted in the fruitful conversations that have emerged since Russia's ruthless full-scale invasion in February 2022. By bringing materials together in one place, this bibliography is intended to foster further those conversations. Its creation was made possible in part by the 2023 financial support of an ASEEES internship for Caroline Prout. Caroline has just been awarded her 2024 MA in Global Studies (with a concentration in Russian, Eurasian and East European Studies) at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. AWSS heartily congratulates Caroline on her many accomplishments, including the compilation of this issue. No bibliography can be exhaustive. Please send omissions or corrections to Christine Worobec (worobec@niu.edu).
